MISCELLANEOUS

Icewine- Harvest

In the last days of 2008 temperatures dropped to a level which allowed producers to go out and pick the remaining grapes left outside in the vineyards. For many this represents the highlight of a year and vintage. Conditions for this quality were rather difficult as the temperatures remained high almost all December including Christmas and finally fell to a reasonable level on the 28th and 29th of December.

On January 6th 2009 Germany got covered by frost coming from the east. During this period night temperatures dropped to -15 to -20°C. Even in Wiesbaden which is unusual. The estate St. Urbans-Hof used these icy nights to pick Eiswein in the early morning of January 7th 09 at -16°C.

New Cooperation with Bottwartal

With January 2009 Wineconsale GmbH is starting cooperation with a wine producer in Württemberg. We will support the Bottwartal vintners in their export efforts. This will also give us access to a good range of medium expensive wines which are priced below our core portfolio of VDP wine estates.

This also happens in a respond to the current situation, which has effects worldwide, and request from several customers.

We herewith announce a further email in which we would like to introduce a small selection of seasonal products for summer 2009 for reasonable prices.
