MARKUS SCHNEIDER in THAILAND

Markus Schneider visited Thailand earlier this year and received excellent feedback on his wines and presentations.

The Bangkok Post called Markus an individualist who is extremely passionate about what he does. A winemaker who strives to produce wines that he would like to enjoy by himself. By doing so he creates a unique style.

The Expression magazine said: "His only philosophy is passion and his theatre is his vineyard in the Pfalz valley."

MARTIN TESCH in Vancouver

Martin has been to Vancouver just recently and presented current as well as matured vintages to clients and journalists.

Western Living Magazine published an excellent article and put Martin in line with trailblazers like Manfred Krankl (Sine Qua Non) and Jonathan Maltus (Chateau Teyssier), two entrepreneurs who brought innovation to the wine business. So did and still does Martin.

Tim Pawsey wrote at North Shore News

"Tesch is smart, witty and very engaging. But to really appreciate what he's achieved you need to understand a little bit about the German wine industry and how it has progressed in the last few years thanks in no small part to the likes of Tesch."

Kurtis Kolt writes at wevancouver.com about Tesch and describes Riesling UNPLUGGES as follows, "A fresh and pure, honest Riesling that's the epitome of a handful of gravel with a generous squeeze each of Meyer lemon, lime and pink grapefruit. Easy and crisp."

Look-out into the vineyards

Due to an extremely mild winter without snow and an equally warm spring vegetation started very early this year and led to a two weeks earlier blossoming compared to the long term average. It took place end of May lasting into early June in some areas. Since then we had a pretty dry period in combination with some really hot days which slowed down the development in the vineyards. Just recently, end of June early July, well needed rain came to our region accompanied by thunder and storms. Luckily no vineyard was damaged.

At the moment the upcoming vintage looks pretty promising. Our 4th newsletter in October will contain a more detailed harvest preview.
